

PHOTOGRAPHIC WORKSHOPS 2010

The early morning sunlight catches the dust from a passing herd of buffalo. A pair of African Skimmers fly low over the Zambezi River as the sun sets. You caught your very first Tiger fish and the smile on your face is just priceless.

Who doesn't bring a camera on holiday to capture just such moments? In the African winter, when both the light and the chances of seeing the more illusive of the wild animals are at its best, Baines' River Camp offers you the unique experience of a photographic workshop.

Award winning wildlife photographers Roger and Pat de la Harpe will guide you through the versatile world of photography in the relaxing and ever changing scenery of the Lower Zambezi Valley in a 5-night / 4-day workshop at Baines' River camp.

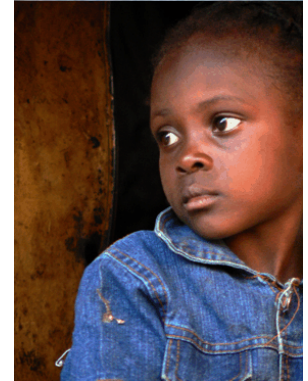

In 2010 Baines' River Camp will further team up with Shenton Safaris' Kaingo Camp, nestled in South Luangwa National Park. This 6-night / 5-day workshop offers the combination of visiting two of Zambia's best wildlife areas, Kaingo's photographic hides and the versatility of the Lower Zambezi Valley.

Essentials to bring

- Basic SLR Digital Camera with one wide angle lens and one telephoto lens
- Minimum 1 GB Memory Card
- Laptop, preferably with Adobe Photoshop Elements installed
- Lightweight tripod for evening shoots
- Manual, chargers, memory card reader or cables to transfer data from the camera to the laptop

Roger and Pat de la Harpe

You may have come across some of their work in magazines such as BBC Wildlife, National Geographic or Getaway. The wildlife publications of these passionate photographers and writers include Big Cats of Mala Mala, Africa's Big Five and Tuli, Land of Giants. Their latest, In search of Africa's Wild Dogs, will hit the shelves in the second half of 2009.
